Historical Sketch

Illinois State Normal University was established in 1857. In 1862 grade school and high school classes were held in the Model School located in Old Main on what would become ISNU's campus in Normal. Tuition was $20 per year. As a large percentage of persons applying to the Normal University had little more than an eighth grade education, high school and liberal arts courses became essential to develop better teachers. By 1890 conditions were very crowded with high-school teachers instructing University language courses as well as most of the high-school courses. The Board of Education abolished the school in 1895.

The school was re-established in 1909 and officially named University High School. The scope and aim of the high school greatly changed when it was re-established. In the beginning it had aimed to prepare pupils for college and the Normal Department with a correspondingly narrow scope. The re-established high school aimed at courses for many different occupations. Much of the credit for the school's success, reputation and standing in the state goes to the early faculty and those who followed. Classes were held in Old Main until 1958 when the building was torn down. University High School had its own building in 1965. Until then U-High students' classes were sprinkled throughout the ISNU campus.

Today, nearly all graduates of the University High School (95%) enroll in post-secondary education, including such prestigious institutions as Stanford, Julliard, MIT, and Harvard. These students become major contributors to society as they assume many important positions in the country's workforce.
